Exuding the "traditional elegance" and "posh" ambience of a "gentleman's club", this "typically British" Piccadilly stalwart (operating on its site since 1742), serves "impeccably presented" dishes including "simply prepared" seafood and "great" game, all available at both dining room and bar seating; "raising one small finger brings immediate attention" from the "charming staff", and "although it's expensive", most agree the overall "experience is worth every penny".
